

how to spend it

August 27, 2018

Stay in a Jean Prouvé masterpiece

Guests of Villa La Coste can now check into a Prouvé prefab – an art installation adapted by Richard Rogers, which is set to become a unique bolthole experience

By Christina Ohly Evans

The kitchen inside the Prouvé 6x6 house

The discerning traveller needs no excuse to visit Château La Coste in the south of France, but a unique experience fusing art and architecture is an enticing added incentive. From Monday October 1, the Provençal winery, museum and boutique bolthole will collaborate with Galerie Patrick Seguin Paris to offer guests the unique experience of booking into a prefabricated house designed by midcentury master Jean Prouvé, which has been adapted for modern use by Pritzker Prize-winning architect Richard Rogers.

The prefabricated house designed by midcentury master Jean Prouvé has been adapted for modern use by Pritzker Prize-winning architect Richard Rogers

The 6x6 Prouvé house – a passion project of gallerist Patrick Seguin that was realised by Rogers in 2015 – is on display at Villa La Coste’s Renzo Piano-designed art gallery. Now, guests will not only be able to marvel at the piece but stay in it (from €2,000 per night) throughout 2019. Prouvé designed the spare, functional Demountable House in 1944 for victims of the second world war left homeless in France’s Lorraine region, but with careful adaptation that preserves the integrity of the original structure, it has become chic accommodation – complete with furnishings and art from Patrick Seguin’s impressive personal collection.

Guests of Villa La Coste can book to stay in the Prouvé house (from €2,000 per night) from Monday October 1

The house is furnished with design classics and art from Patrick Seguin's personal collection

Guests will be in good company during their stay, as Château La Coste hosts a world-class art collection featuring works by Louise Bourgeois, Alexander Calder and Ai Wei Wei.

Villa La Coste's Renzo Piano-designed art gallery